PREDICTS A DEBT OF
40 BILLIONS, JAN 1STTreasury Seen Emptied By Roosevelt Campaign, and Warning IssuedPLAN TO STRIP COFFERSSays Postmaster General Will Make Exorbitant
Demands

WASHINGTON, June 29—Accumulated Government liabilities of approximately $40,000,000,000 by next January 1st were predicted today by Representative Taber, of New York, as ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee.

He made the forecast in a statement declaring the Treasury would be "stripped" by that time "to meet the exorbitant election demands of General Farley."

Stating there had been spent by the Roosevelt Administration since March 4, 1933, approximately $25,000,000,000, Taber said "it is manifest that the only safety for the people is the retirement of the Roosevelt Administration."

Recapitulating the recent Congress' allowances out of the Treasury, the New Yorker said they totaled upwards of $20,000,000,000—"the largest of any peace-time Congress."

The last session just ended, he estimated, appropriated $10,129,710,521, all of which he said comprised direct new appropriations except $1,505,957,521 in so-called permanent annually recurring appropriations allowed without hearings, and approximately $375,000,000 of previously allowed but unexpended funds.

In the first session of the 74th Congress, Taber said, the over-all total was $10,459,756,227, of that $2,200,000,000 was left over.

Anniversary of Laying of Corner-Stone is Observed

EDDINGTON, June 29—The 50th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of Eddington Presbyterian Church was observed yesterday morning, when a special sermon was delivered by the Rev. Arthur Sargis on "Christ, the Cornerstone."

The Scripture reading for the morning was the second chapter of Ephesians; and the responsive reading was the second chapter of 1st Peter.

The pastor mentioned during the service that two individuals who had attended the cornerstone laying ceremonies were present at yesterday's service. These were: Mrs. E. H. Austin and H. W. Moore.

The cornerstone was laid on June 30, 1886, and last week the date "1886" was cut on the stone.

LONDON SENTIMENT
SHOWS GREAT GROWTHLandon Clubs Are Springing Up All Over The StateENTHUSIASM IS SHOWN

HARRISBURG, June 29—Even with the Democratic convention in full swing at Philadelphia last week Landon sentiment continued to grow in Pennsylvania and distraught Democrats began to quarrel with each other at Harrisburg.

Landon clubs are springing up all over the State and a score of counties are demanding that the national nominees address campaign rallies for which arrangements already are being made. The latest to seek the presence of Landon and Knox is the management of the McClure Bean Soup celebration, an outing that since Civil War Days has drawn thousands every year, and which last year was addressed by Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.

Every mail continues to bring to State Chairman M. Harvey Taylor fresh assurances of Republican enthusiasm over the candidates and the platform.

On the other hand, the demoralization of the Democratic leadership may be judged by the assault which Eddie Jones, head of the WPA, made on Governor Hughes.

Popular Florida Rotarian And Musician Visits Here

A popular and widely-known Florida Rotarian was entertained in Bristol over the week-end, following sessions of the Rotary International in Atlantic City, N. J., to which meetings he was a delegate from the Fort Myers Rotary Club.

The visitor, Harold L. Moreland, Fort Myers, was entertained by a prominent Bristol Rotarian, Robert Ruel, and his wife, prior to his leaving for Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., where he will continue his musical education.

In his native Florida, Mr. Moreland and his violin—on which instrument he is most proficient—are referred to from the ocean to the gulf, and from Georgia to the Keys, as "Harold and his Violin."

Mr. Moreland, during the sessions of the Rotary convention on the New Jersey coast, thrilled thousands with his solo numbers. So proficient is he on the instrument that his skill attracted the attention of Mrs. Mina Edison-Hughes, a few years ago. Under the sponsorship of the former Mrs. Thomas Edison, Mr. Moreland is sent each Summer to Chautauqua headquarters, at Chautauqua Lake, to study music.

Mr. Moreland is in charge of the gas and water service for the city of Fort Myers; and he is likewise contact man for visitors to Fort Myers, being appointed as such by the city council. In this manner, and likewise through his Rotary connections, the resident of Florida, contacts hundreds of people annually. He is known to Rotarians throughout the state of Florida, whom he frequently entertains with his "riddle" as the Rotarians are wont to refer to the instrument.

The Rotarian has many interests in addition to his club activities. He is keenly interested in his vocation; loves music, his avocation; and enjoys his happy hours at home with Mrs. Moreland and the three children. Born in Denver, Col., the violinist received his early musical education in that city. This is his third Summer spent at Chautauqua headquarters. Prior to taking up his studies there, he will visit Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Motoring here from the South, Mr. Moreland found much enjoyment in the scenery enroute; but he hasn't found any spot that he thinks surpasses Fort Myers, to which city he is most loyal. He likes to tell of the fine Silver King tarpon that abound in that vicinity, "the greatest tarpon grounds on the West coast of Florida," and likes others to enjoy the famed "Avenue of Palms" which he claims is the finest in the United States. He has been a resident of Florida for nine years. Although he has frequently visited in Pennsylvania, this was Mr. Moreland's first trip to Bristol.

Mr. Ruel attended sessions of the Rotary International convention as an alternate delegate. The delegate from Bristol Rotary Club was Dr. H. Doyle Webb.

A MILLION JOBS LOST

By Representative Clare E. Hoffman of Michigan

A million men thrown out of employment by one New Deal measure.

The above is not a charge made by someone who is disgruntled, by some political critic, by an anti-New Dealer, by a chronic fault-finder. It is a statement of fact found in a New Deal Government report.

A group of Government experts were assigned to investigate the facts and to report on some of the results following the enactment of the AAA. In September of 1935, their report was made. It was signed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace himself and put away in the file. Evidently the Secretary did not read it, or if he did, he recognized the danger and did what he could to bury it securely, for Senators and Congressmen asking for it were told that the original was "not available."

A resolution in the Senate brought it to light and a Senator permitted to read the original, which was then returned to Mr. Wallace's office. Later, a revised report, more acceptable to the Administration, was issued. But the original report still exists. It contains this paragraph:

"A permanent drastic restriction in domestic cotton acreage would cause serious problems of finding alternative opportunities for the labor and production resources normally used in cotton production. Rough approximations indicate that 27,000,000 acres in cotton harvested in the United States in 1934 utilized the services of almost 1,000,000 fewer man-equivalents than were used during the five-year period 1928-1932, when an average of 40,550,000 acres in cotton were harvested annually."

So here you have one New Deal measure, the operation of which took out of employment one million men in this one industry.

With this record in this one industry, are you wondering how many men were thrown out of employment by all the New Deal activities?

HOUSTON DUNN LOSES
FIRST STEP OF FIGHTCourt Rejects Plea That His Wife's Suit Is
FaultyGIVEN 15 DAYS TO REPLY

PHILADELPHIA, June 29—Houston Dunn, Philadelphia insurance broker, has lost the first round in his battle against paying $20,273 additional as support for his wealthy wife, Mrs. Elsie Dunn, former president of the Pennsylvania Grand Opera Company.

The Dunns formerly resided in Bristol. Dunn, whose income is said to be $12,000 a year, now is paying $100 a week to support Mrs. Dunn and their three children.

Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, in Domestic Relations Court, dismissed Dunn's affidavit of defense, which held Mrs. Dunn's suit was improperly brought. He ruled that the insurance man must defend the action on its merits.

Within 15 days, therefore, Dunn must prove either that his income is not sufficient to meet the additional claim, or that the claim itself is unreasonable.

Mrs. Dunn inherited $1,000,000 from an aunt in 1918, and received $20,000 a year from one trust fund and considerably more from several others. She is seeking expenses for the family from January, 1932, when her husband left her, until January, 1935, when the $100 weekly support order went into effect. She claims:

For herself, $33 a week, or a total of $5115.

For a son, Newbold, 21, $22 a week until he came of age, or a total of $2464.

For Elizabeth, 17, $22 a week, or $3410.

For Alice, 16, same.

For Jonathan, 10, same.

Another son, James, was shot dead accidentally by a chum in March, 1935, while they were examining an old French dueling pistol. He was 13. Mrs. Dunn lists expenses for him at $22 a week until the time of his death, or a total of $2464.

In an earlier support action, Dunn's attorney, William A. Gray, termed Mrs. Dunn the "financial angel of a pet opera company," and showed that her income was much greater than that of her husband.

Judge Theodore Rosen ruled, then, however, that even though Mrs. Dunn is independently wealthy her husband is obligated to contribute to her support and that of their children.

Mrs. Dunn, who is 55, lives at 401 S. 22nd street, Philadelphia. Dunn, who is 55, lives in Bryn Mawr. They have one other son, Houston, Jr., 26. He was divorced in 1934 by the former Elizabeth Linn, of "Linnholme," Telford, at Norristown.

Houston Dunn, Jr., now resides in Bristol Township at "Sunbury," near Newportville.

Assemblyman Stockham introduced the bill in the Legislature in an effort to secure protection for the residents of North Delmarv avenue and the island from future floods.

Pedestrians Should Exercise Caution

Adults as well as children are the cause of numerous automobile accidents and only the other day a motorist stated that within an hour's time three adults stepped out from behind other cars into the path of his machine.

Each time the informant had anticipated the action of the pedestrian and had sounded his horn as a warning. No accident occurred but there might have been one, but for the thoughtfulness of the motorist.

Pedestrians can do much to prevent accidents and help in keeping Bristol's accident record clean.

COST OF GOVERNMENT

The continually mounting cost of government will doubtless be stressed in the campaign of this year. So far as those costs relate to federal expenditures for normal purposes and for those other expenditures which are made for emergent purposes, they should be of direct interest and concern to the people in connection with their attitude in the national contest. Only indirectly, however, do these affect the governmental cost of subdivisions and only to the extent that federal grants encourage local enterprises carried on at public expense.

What is of alarming significance and indicative of the necessity for a closer scrutiny of all government expenditures, from national down to the smallest tax-levying district, is the fact that the per capita cost of all government in the United States in 1934 was $114.11 for a gross expenditure of $14,449,000,000, or more than one-sixth of the total national income for the year. These figures are the product of a survey by the National Industrial Conference Board. The per capita cost of $114.11 compares with an expenditure of $97.28 for 1933. Total expenditures of the nearly 200,000 governmental agencies were up more than $1,000,000,000 above the post-war peak reached in 1932.

Federal expenditures for 1934 were $6,784,000,000, or more than $2,000,000,000 above the level for the two preceding years, and represented 47 per cent of all governmental expenditures, compared with 37 per cent in 1933.

Tax collections for the year were about $8,767,000,000, compared with $7,501,000,000 for 1933, when collections ran 25 per cent below the peak year of 1930. Federal collections for 1935 were $3,546,000,000, of which 30 per cent was from income taxes, against 66.4 per cent in 1930, the difference being made up largely from various invisible taxes.

"The gross debt of all governments in the United States on June 30, 1935, amounted to a little less than $48,000,000,000. The gross total is estimated at approximately $50,000,000,000 as of February 19, 1936. Between 1929 and the early part of 1936, the gross debt increased by about 50 per cent," the report said.

BRING HOME GOOD IDEAS

Many people here in Bristol are going away on vacations. We all wish them a good time, and hope they will conclude, after their wanderings, that the old home town is the best place yet.

One of the most useful features of the vacation travel habit, is that it should induce people to absorb good ideas elsewhere, and bring them back to use at home. When people go through many towns that have beautiful streets, parks, playgrounds, and nice home places, it should fill them with a resolve to accomplish the same or better results at home.

They should return to a new ambition, determined to do all in their power toward making Bristol the equal in attractiveness of any community they have visited.

Being your own boss isn't so pleasant. There's no advantage in loafing when you aren't watched.

The only sure thing about money theories is that the more plausible they sound the dumber they are.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Dec. 24, 1874. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Last Saturday morning 13 vagrants were fed by John H. Chambers, at his store, each receiving a plentiful supply of bread, scrapie and hot coffee. Some humane persons have placed in Mr. Chambers hands funds to provide for feeding the tramps who lodge in the town hall.

Samuel Silbert, formerly of Bristol, who has been in the U. S. Army, on duty out West, was returning home on a furlough last week, and on arriving at Pittsburgh got off the train for a few minutes. A passing train struck him and tore off his leg. He is now in the hospital at Philadelphia.

The property situated at the corner of Buckley and Beaver streets, consisting of 17 acres of ground, offered at public sale by Mary Headley, was purchased by C. N. Taylor, yesterday, for $5,600.

Notwithstanding the tightness of the money market the stores of dealers in holiday goods have been crowded with purchasers, and business has far exceeded the expectations of dealers.

The M. E. Church at Yardleyville was dedicated last Sunday.

An election for Borough officers will be held at Attleborough in February.

It is stated that 4000 boats passed through the Bristol lock during the year 1874.

The machinery and old iron are about all removed from the rolling mill. The place has an extremely forlorn and deserted appearance.

Eddie Collins and two other boys named Bogert and Stevens of Penns Manor, were drowned last Monday afternoon, while playing on a pond.

About a week ago, Charles L. Twining, of Wrightstown, lost three valuable horses by putrid sore throat. They lived but five days from the time they were taken with the disease.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has already begun a new iron structure to take the place of the old wooden bridge across the Delaware at Trenton, which has stood for 70 years, and was in its day considered the finest specimen of bridge architecture in the country.

Bristol Lodge, No. 25, A. Y. M.—At a stated meeting, held Saturday evening, December 19, 1874—A. L. 5874, the following brothers were duly elected as officers to serve the ensuing year: R. Henry Morris, W. M.; Charles S. Vandergrift, S. W.; J. Almer Martin, S. W.; William B. Baker, treasurer; Lewis M. Wharton, secretary. P. M., B. F. Gilkeson installed the brothers elect, after which each took his respective station in the lodge. . . . The retiring W. M., John G. Vandergrift, in his very able and appropriate address, made honorable mention of the loss sustained by the Lodge in the demise of our lamented brother, Dr. Joseph H. Schenck, as well as Theodore S. Green and William Paff, Jr., all of whom have been called from our midst during the past year.

Mohican Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, of Bristol, held their second annual "Hot-tuck Impiana" last Monday evening at Cabene's hall. There were about 150 persons present, more than half of whom were ladies. Dr. Potts delivered the evening address in an effective manner. "Komical Konly" sang some humorous pieces with fine effect, Miss Douglass, daughter of Thomas B. Douglass of Bristol, agreeably entertained the audience with some excellent singing, and William F. Bailey delivered an eloquent address in his usual happy style. . . .

WARMINSTER—It has become a custom with the people of Hatboro and vicinity to have their driving horses clipped. Mr. Melcher, of Horscham, had a favorite horse of his clipped which he valued very highly.

The horse being exposed to the storm on the evening of the 6th of December, has since died from a cold.

Nine converts were baptised on Sunday last, by Rev. W. H. Conard, of the Davisville Baptist Church, making 32 in all since December 6th.

Joshua Bennett, of Hartsville, lost a valuable young horse one day last week, by having him killed on a horse power while threshing.

PENNS MANOR WHARF—The citizens of this historical locality have been without direct public communication with the surrounding world since the destruction of Robbin's Wharf in the Winter of '72 and '73. Trenton being the nearest point on navigation, most of the products of this fertile section were hauled to that city at great cost and inconvenience. After two years of vexatious negotiation with the Steamboat Company, the citizens of the neighborhood determined to act independently, and the present substantial wharf is the result of their private enterprise.

Actual work was not begun until September from which time it has been actively prosecuted until its completion about three weeks ago, at a cost of upwards of $3,000. It is a solid pier of 40 feet in width, as substantial as any on the Delaware river, and is adequate to the heavy traffic it must accommodate. It is located on the farm of the late Arthur Collins, through which a road will soon be opened direct to the wharf. . . .

mits, and turban of the same tone and carried a bouquet of pink flowers.

A reception for the bridal party and the immediate families was held at the bride's home. Mr. and Mrs. Colgan left Saturday afternoon for a motor trip through New York State to Niagara Falls. They will be away one week. The bride travelled in a turquoise blue paisley dress trimmed with brown and she wore accessories of brown.

Mrs. Colgan was born in St. Louis, Mo., but has been a resident of Bristol for the past nine years. She graduated from Bristol High School with the class of 1934. Mr. Colgan has been a resident of Bristol for a number of years and is employed by the Dowden Engineering Company.

EDGELEY, June 29—Miss Anna Tait, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Tait and William Coburn, Philadelphia, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in All Saints' Episcopal Church, Fallsington, with the Rev. Francis Smith officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, John Tait. Miss Alice Wolvin was bridesmaid, and Andrew Spears, Philadelphia, acted as best man. Mrs. Frank Wilson played the wedding march, and Charles Wohlgenuth and Vernon Reed, Philadelphia, were ushers.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and lace, form fitting, with Queen Anne collar which buttoned down the back, the long skirt ending in a train. Her veil of tulle edged with lace, was arranged in cap effect with a halo of orange blossoms. Her slippers were white satin, and she carried a bouquet of calla lilies and baby's breath.

The bridesmaid was attired in pink cellanese chiffon, form-fitting with shirring at the neckline, and cape-like sleeves, with a pink turban of tulle and lace, with milts to match. Her slippers were pink satin, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath.

The bride's mother was dressed in green and white chiffon, with white accessories, and wore a corsage of tea roses. The groom's mother wore an orchid gown with yellow accessories, and a corsage of tea roses.

The wedding was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, where dinner was served. The couple left Sunday for the seashore. Following this Mr. and Mrs. Coburn plan to go to New York for a few days and upon returning will reside in Philadelphia where Mr. Coburn is employed by the Philadelphia Record.

EDGELEY, June 29—Herman Michael took as his bride on Saturday, Miss Margaret Wiggins, Morrisville. The couple were married at the home of the bride's parents, Keystone avenue, with Miss Elizabeth Wiggins, the bride's sister, acting as bridesmaid, and Samuel Wiggins, brother of the bride, serving as best man. The Rev. Shires, Mayfair, officiated.

The bride was attired in white dress with white accessories, and wore a corsage of roses, delphinium and baby's breath. The bridesmaid was dressed in pink, with accessories to match, and a corsage of pink roses and baby's breath.

The couple left for Atlantic City, N. J., for their honeymoon. Mrs. Michael travelled in white. The couple will live in Morrisville with the bride's parents upon their return.

Steamed Eggs for Digestibility

Place fresh eggs in cold water, allowing half cup to an egg. Cover saucepan, bring to a boil, turn off all heat and eggs will steam until thoroughly cooked! In this manner, egg whites are tender and the yolks never have a dark ring on the edge.

Runaway Trawler "Under Arrest"

The oceanwide chase which started when the captain and crew of the trawler "Girl Pat" spirited her from her home port of Grimsby, England, ended at Georgetown, British Guiana. A British government customs boat rammed the runaway and brought her into port—a prisoner.

"KING OF HEARTS"

SYNOPSIS

Try as she might, Lynn Bartel, young mannequin at Dunning's, could not be intimate with the girls at the shop. It was not that she acted superior, but her innate good breeding and aristocratic air placed her on a higher social level than the others. Lynn's mother had been a southern society belle, but she sacrificed wealth and position to marry John Bartel and go to Chicago with him. Following his death, Marion Bartel preferred to struggle along in meagre circumstances rather than return to her family. It was Mrs. Bartel's desire that Lynn have the best training and background possible so, despite financial straits, she sent her to the exclusive Merwin Heath School. Lynn had no friends for she could not invite her school-mates to the simple room she shared with her mother at Mrs. Kime's boarding house and Mrs. Bartel never permitted her to associate with girls she met elsewhere. Mrs. Bartel planned great things for her daughter but she died while the girl was still at school. So Lynn left school and went to work. Her wealthy and pampered cousin, "Dot" Merchon, invites Lynn to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras. Lynn is very light hearted as she goes to business the next morning, intent on asking permission to go south. She models a summer frock which would have been ideal for her trip. Celia Dolan, a debutante, orders it.

CHAPTER V

Miss Fayne fluttered solicitously, as if she were very much pleased with the quick sale, but she said in a low voice to Lynn, "She won't keep it. She never does. Always has a half dozen sent out before she decides at all, and sometimes not then. I'll bet she knows she doesn't want it when she orders it. Probably goes to several shops and does the same thing, just for something to do, then has a grand style show all her own, with little adoring-eyes for an audience. I wish that was all I had to do," contemptuously.

"Oh, no you don't!" Lynn denied. "No more than I do. No wonder she's bored and cynical and dissipated. When a woman can't get a thrill out of buying a new dress, she's pretty far gone."

"Lynn," another salesgirl interrupted, "will you model that black and silver lace, next? My customer will take a forty-four, but I want her to see you in it, first," she winked slyly.

The day wore on, a varied succession of gowns and wraps. During one hour of midday, Lynn took her turn at parading among the little silver and ebony tables in the tea-room, in an effort to lure the luncheon patrons to the apparel shop. She posed and prouced, named prices and made gracious replies to tentative inquiries.

Sales were brisk all day. The department assumed a prosperous air. Mr. Lowry displayed his efficiency and was a trifle less formidable. Lynn's hopes mounted. This might be an opportune time to approach him. She hadn't much time for planning if she did leave in two weeks, and Dot would want her reply at once.

She returned from her own solitary lunch fifteen minutes earlier than was necessary. She would try to see Mr. Lowry in his office, alone. Her fingers trembled a little as she adjusted the white pique collar of her black crepe frock and smoothed her shining hair carefully, waiting to hasten that interview and dreading it at the same time.

Inquiry on the floor assured her that Mr. Lowry was in his office. She walked hurriedly toward its closed door, before she could change her mind. The light from inside glowed through its opaque ground glass with an enigmatic promise. She knocked timidly, and entered at the abrupt summons which followed.

Mr. Lowry was surprised to see Lynn. His expression of disapproval made that fact quite obvious. He did not rise from his swivel chair behind his desk, though his frowning courtesy was very familiar to regular patrons. His small, keen eyes fastened upon Lynn with critical interrogation.

"Mr. Lowry," she began hesitantly, "I was wondering if I might have—a little vacation."

His thin lips parted with consternation. "A vacation?" he snapped, then laughed with a short unpleasant sound. "And who are you—to request a winter vacation, may I ask?"

"Well, you see—my cousin in New Orleans has invited me to attend the Mardi Gras, and I thought—if I might have just a week off—" she stopped anxiously, and Mr. Lowry moistened his lips as if he were enjoying her discomfort. To his type of individual, power was tyranny rather than leadership.

"You are at liberty to do as you wish," he said with surprising suddenness.

"You mean—I may have a week—and come back—here?" Lynn's anxious face brightened with the triumph which her hands reached exclusive or expensive about the food there, but even forty cents was more than their pay checks warranted for a daily lunch allowance. But the atmosphere was brisk and modern, with antithetic features such as an old stone fireplace in one end of the room and a pewter-decorated dresser in the other. The waitresses wore quaint fagoted yellow uniforms and the vast room was always well filled.

The girls joined the waiting line with their trays, pushing them along the shining metal tracks which followed the steam tables, and pausing for selections. Endive and water cress with Roquefort cheese dressing was a favorite indulgence of Lynn's, because Mrs. Kime's budget did not permit such items on her excellent but economical menus. Su-out to seize in an appealing gesture. He shrugged slightly and turned in his chair toward the papers which lay on the desk before him. "I couldn't guarantee that, of course," his lips drew together with emphatic dismissal.

"Oh!" the word was a whisper of vanished hope. "Thank you, Mr. Lowry, I'll stay." The promise was eloquent with despair, and very gratifying to Mr. Lowry's sense of importance.

Lynn fled. All the brightness and cheer and exuberance of the morning were gone. It wasn't just the lost hope of pleasure which made her feel so empty and dull. She hadn't more than half expected to go away, anyhow. It was her employer's attitude which left her weak and heartless. No sympathy or understanding, not even common courtesy had been offered her. It revealed to her, also, how unstable her position was, even though she had filled it satisfactorily for more than a year. Which frightened her and added to her panic. The afternoon dragged on.

She wrote to Dot that evening, regretting that she could not accept her cousin's invitation, complimenting her cousin's honorable and enviable position as queen of the Mardi Gras. And when she sealed the letter she felt as if she were closing a door on something very important in her life. But what else could she do, when she could not see beyond that door? Her vision penetrated only as far as Mr. Lowry's cryptic refusal to guarantee her place at Dunning's, and only that was no farther than yesterday.

She went with Susanne to lunch on the following day. Finally, she made a sandwich and a glass of milk at a desk were sufficient, but when the two made a gesture of extravagance, they went to the Fireside Cafeteria. There was nothing same favored rich desserts with fantastic decorations, which may have accounted in some degree for that difference in their complexions which Susanne continually deplored. But they were concerned with other interests, once the selection of their food was made.

"Well, have you talked to Lowry?" asked Susanne, unrolling her flatware from its warm cotton napkin.

"Yes," Lynn admitted meekly. "He won't let me go."

"I'd like to know why not?" hotly, her eyes threatening conflict.

"Oh, he would let me go, all right. The important point is that he won't guarantee I may come back. So that settles it. I wrote to my cousin last night that I can't go."

"I think you're crazy, if you want to know," Susanne declared. "I'd never miss the chance of a lifetime just to hold down the job you have."

"I know it isn't important, but it's a living."

"Say, as if you couldn't make a living anywhere! Why come back here at all? Girls work in New Orleans, too. If you had a grand position of some kind—well, that would be a horse of another stable. But a swell looking model like you could go anywhere and get work. There's plenty of other things you could do, too."

"Perhaps—if I had a chance," doubtfully.

"Oh, be a sport—do a little gambling with life, with all the odds in your favor. Staying at Dunning's never will get you anywhere, anyway."

"I know that, but it's an anchor."

"It's an anchor, all right, all right. But if you stay in one port for very long, you get your hull covered with barnacles that finally get the best of you. No more voyages, then."

THE GLORIOUS GO FORTH

No one can deny they've taken their place in the sun—these brilliant American women. A week-day finds them, as a matter of course, light-heartedly assuming a full share of the work and responsibility of this busy world. But a holiday sees them off with equal enthusiasm for a carefree playtime. Fresh—relaxed—youthful—they hail the freedom of field and road and beach—and the pursuit of happiness.

Gone are the green veils and the timid gestures of other days. Gone the dull complexions—and the dragging old-fashioned grind of duty that kept them prisoners from the sun. Nowadays woman's work is done—and done in time for a wave and a beauty treatment.

How? By keeping herself posted on the newest ways to do things—the time-savers, beauty builders, feminine aids and allies. By reading, studying, comparing and experimenting—in the advertising pages of this very newspaper. Advertising is writing a great share of the modern woman's independence program.

The glorious go forth to buy, as they go to play, with assurance and the resolve to make the most of life. They know what they want and where to find it, and the right price to pay. The time and money saved are beauty aids in themselves.

Why Worry About Waste and Extravagance? It's Only the Taxpayers' Money!

DAYTON, O.—Dayton's much-heralded adventure in communal home making under the auspices of Franklin D. Roosevelt's rural rehabilitation program has come to an inglorious and soft-pedaled conclusion.

The dozen or more families who moved into the homestead unit on Liberty road, seven miles west of Dayton, with bright hopes of a cozy home, a few acres, and cows and pigs and chickens, are scattered to the winds. The original farm, with its crestfallen line of houses, is today a deserted village which pastures a few goats, and is studded with abandoned and uncompleted homes.

On January 15, the government, through one of its subsidiary New Deal corporations, took over a total of $21,806 in notes and obligations for cash and materials advanced to the colonists, and also assumed title to the entire property, thus absorbing a loss of more than $300,000, in addition to the large amounts expended for supervision and administration. Settlers remaining on the tract are to be reimbursed for expenditures incurred by them, and have all agreed to seek new homes in more favorable surroundings. The property itself now becomes one of the numerous "assets" of Dr. Tugwell's Resettlement administration.

Another Tugwell Utopia.

Originally a grant of $50,000 was made by the government for the purpose of establishing the project. The idea was that about 35 families were to be located on the tract; loaned sufficient funds to build homes; encouraged in establishing a more or less Utopian community in which their earnings, outside of the colony, would be supplemented by gardening, poultry, modest dairying and so on.

Now that the project has fallen upon its present evil days, it is announced that a survey is to be made by a corps of engineers to determine whether or not the land is suitable for the purposes intended.

One of the great difficulties has been water supply. Wells have been driven all over the place, but only surface water discovered and this far from sufficient for the needs of the colonists.

Families Leave in Disgust.

In the palmy days of the project, a dozen families were established on the area. Six of them managed to struggle through nearly two years of experimentation. The half-finished and never occupied home pictured here, which the Curtis Bailey family started to build, got almost to the roof stage before the government stopped supplying funds for its construction. Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Anderson, who came to Dayton from Illinois, attracted by the bright picture painted of possibilities on the Dayton homestead, wintered three small children in another uncompleted, but far more elaborate dwelling, then gave up in disgust at the prospect of going through another winter in a home which had an elaborate brick exterior, but lacked either floors or window sashes. Gas and phone service were provided, if desired, but water was lacking. No cows were maintained by the colonists, but the area did provide pasture for goats.

The colony did not fail through any lack of attention by sociological experts, or failure of Dayton citizens to cooperate. The house in which the Andersons lived was originally built by Charlotte Mary Conover Jones, once secretary of the National League of Women Voters, who resided on the homestead for some time, but finally left, complaining of lack of proper support by the government in establishing the colony.

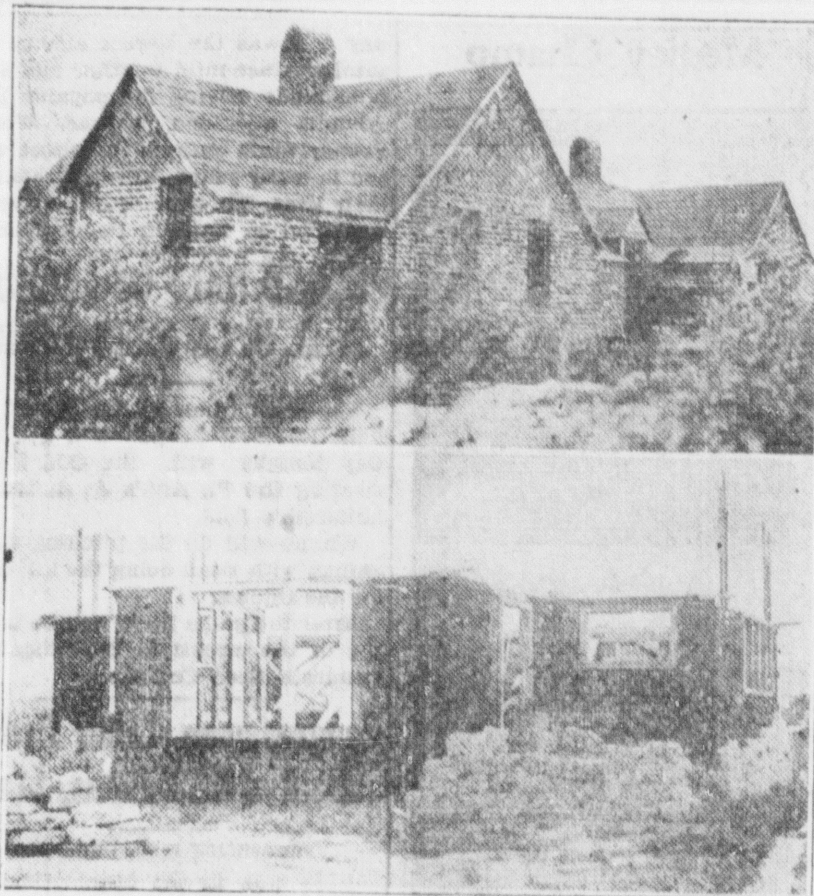

Ballyhoo Suddenly Dies.

The Dayton colony was one of the first of the Roosevelt administration resettlement projects, and was given nation-wide publicity in its early stages. The abandonment, however, has not been given equal attention. In fact, when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt visited Dayton recently, she did not visit the farm.

At present, the government has suspended activities, and the whole ambitious project has been abandoned. In Dayton, few expect it to be revived. A weed covered wilderness, populated by a few stray goats, more pathetic than any deserted village that Goldsmith ever imagined, remains as a reminder of a dream that turned out to be a nightmare for the optimistic American citizens who once had faith and hope in regimentalization and planned economy.

What will happen during 1936 nobody seems to know.

Roosevelt's 'Model Community' Is Now 'Deserted Village'

When he wrote the "Deserted Village", Oliver Goldsmith had never seen the houses on "Liberty Road" in this Resettlement project near Dayton, Ohio, but he had the right idea.

Zioncheck "Checks Out"

Washington, June 29—Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, Democrat, of Washington state, who vaulted a seven-foot wire fence and escaped from the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Hospital at Towson, Md., yesterday, returned to his office in the House of Representatives office building this morning. Capital police were told by a char woman that the law-maker appeared at his office at 4 a. m. "He came in and chased me out."

News of his return here spread quickly, and soon a flock of reporters had assembled outside his office. The door was locked and he was making no move to answer the telephone. City police indicated he would not be arrested nor held. Inspector Bernard Thompson expressed Zioncheck as a fugitive from justice.

Zioncheck did not have any money. He wore a white shirt, dark blue trousers and tennis shoes. He was tossing a medicine ball with other male patients in the exercise yard shortly before noon. He suddenly scaled the fence.

The patients were in the care of three male orderlies, who were not armed. When Zioncheck disappeared over the fence, one of the orderlies ran outside the gate just in time to see the fleeing Congressman advance into a densely wooded section of the grounds.

Woman Beaten To Death

Chicago, Ill., June 29—While her seven-year-old son, who lay beside her in bed, looked on in terror, Mrs. Florence Thompson Castle, 26, was beaten to death last night in her room at the Devonshire Hotel by a huge Negro.

Medley Champ

Katherine Rawls won with ease the 300-meter individual medley race at the A. A. U. women's swimming meet at Manhattan Beach, N. Y. This is the form that did it.

After the murder, the Negro scrawled in lipstick on the mirror: "This is the Black Legion."

The brutal slaying was not discovered until the child, Jimmy, who fell asleep soon after, awoke about six a. m. and came down into the lobby.

Quaking in fear, the child told his story of being awakened by "pounding." The noise was the negro beating his mother on the head with a brick, which he wielded so fiercely that it was broken in two. The pieces were left in the room. The negro escaped from the fifth floor room down a fire escape.

Jimmy came to Chicago yesterday from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where he lived with his paternal grandparents, to visit his mother, and her parents in South Chicago. His mother brought him to the hotel last evening.

101,127 was in the automatically recurring permanent appropriations and nearly $1,000,000,000 in reappropriations.

"The reason that the appropriations for the second session are lower than those for the first session is that there was about $3,000,000,000 more appropriated last year for so-called relief," he explained.

"Of course, last year's appropriations were intended to cover a 12-month period, while this year it is openly stated that the wasteful and inefficient relief for which we have appropriated funds in the second session will all be expended by January 1, 1937.

"If we were to continue fraudulent relief appropriations on the same basis that they have been carried on under the Roosevelt Administration after January 1, next, for the rest of the fiscal year 1937, a deficiency bill of $2,500,000,000 for that purpose would be in order by January 1, because the Treasury will be stripped by that time to meet the exorbitant election demands of General Farley.

"In other words, if appropriations had been on the same basis as last year to carry the fraudulent relief all through the year the appropriations for this session would have been at least $1,000,000,000 more than the appropriations for last session. It also means that if Federal relief of any description is carried on beyond January 1 there must be further large appropriations in January."

Landon Sentiment Shows Great Growth

ernor Earle and Karl deSchweinitz, Emergency Relief Board Director, charging that if direct relief were properly administered Governor Earle wouldn't need to ask the Legislature for a single penny of new taxes.

This was on the very eve of Earle's appearance before the Democratic convention in Philadelphia. Jones, who owes his appointment to the influence of Senator Guffey, was permitted to tell the voters of the State that the Governor is trying to soak the taxpayers of Pennsylvania for $55,000,000 which would not be needed if the Governor's relief director would do his duty and abolish direct relief to all employables, and practically turn the whole thing over to WPA.

That is precisely what the Republican Senate has been contending. Senator Prince had made the same argument in a widely published speech the week previous, and Republican Senators were astonished when Jones, who was supposed to be a close friend of Earle, came along to verify their assertions and to discredit the Governor.

Just what this attack by Jones upon the Governor means politically nobody in Harrisburg has been able to find out.

Certain it is that Jones has made it hard for Earle to convince Democratic legislators that they should sacrifice whatever chances they may have of reelection next Fall by voting for needless taxes that are bound to meet with popular disapproval.

It seems to prove, among other things, that Jones is a stronger man at Washington than Earle. It indicates that Guffey does not mind seeing the Governor get a slap in the face, for it is not considered likely that Jones would have issued such an important statement without Guffey's approval.

Just what Earle will do by way of reprisal was not apparent when this was written. He has displayed ability to take a lot of punishment without open retaliation. Not long since his Secretary of Revenue "Jack" Kelly openly defied him and fought all night with him at the Mansion here over representation on the Democratic National Committee. Kelly was insubordinate but the Governor apparently didn't dare chastise him. So it may be that Jones will be able also to bat the Governor over his official nose and make him like it. The outcome will be watched with interest. But it bodes no good for New Deal harmony on the eve of the Presidential election.

The secretaries, Mrs. Emma S. Woodman, recording; and Mrs. Edna C. Search, corresponding, were continued in office. Miss Gladys Harper, on behalf of the Y. T. C., presented a corsage bouquet to each of the retiring and incoming officers. She also presented to each of the retiring officers a W. C. T. U. bow pin set with seed pearls, the gifts of the local unions in appreciation of their faithful and efficient service. Appreciation of the very successful, untiring work of Miss Gladys Harper as leader of the young people, the Youths' Temperance Council, from which she is retiring, was expressed by a large spray of gladioli and babies' breath. Miss Harper will be succeeded by Mrs. Zelly, Warrington.

The noon hour of prayer was observed by a period of silence.

The devotional service at the afternoon session was in charge of the Rev. Walter Pugh.

Recommendations of the executive session were accepted by the convention and delegates to the State Convention at Lebanon, October 1-5, appointed. The report of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edna C. Search, summed up the activities of the local branches and those of the county, a gratifying record showing what may be accomplished by faithfulness on the part of each unit.

The department of Temperance Light Bearers, Mrs. Agnes Cadwalader, director, was demonstrated by five little tots being taken to the platform to wear the white ribbon tied on their wrists while the convention sang, "When He cometh, when He cometh to make up His jewels, all the pure ones, all the bright ones, His loved and His own."

A group from the Loyal Temperance Legion presented a sketch showing the effect of the cigarette in slowing the brain action and lowering the moral tone of the pupil in school. Three other little girls, 10 years old, gave an astonishing exhibition of musical talent in rendering piano solos in most cred-

Vocal solos by Mrs. Robert Stapler, Makefield; Miss Lillian Van Artsdalen and Mrs. Francis Thomas, Yardley, interspersed the program and refreshed the audience.

The speaker of the afternoon, Miss Florence Singer, a former missionary to Japan, told of the activities of the W. C. T. U. in that land of flowers, where the blossoms abound and lilies-of-the-valley grow in wild profusion, covering the moors with a mantle of loveliness. In 1886, when, pursuant to the far-flung vision of Frances Willard, white ribbon missionaries travelled around the world "winding the ribbon around the nations" the W. C. T. U. was established in Japan under the leadership of Madame Yajima, that wonderful, frail little woman who gathered the names of 11,000 women of Japan to a petition for Peace, and when more than 80 years old travelled over seas and continents presenting it to the rulers of the great nations. Under her successors the work of the W. C. T. U. is being faithfully and successfully carried on.

At the close of the meeting all were invited to remain for a reception to the retiring and new officers, at which fruit juices and cookies were served.
